Washington, D.C. – For the second time, President Bush vetoed a bill that would provide 10 million children with health care coverage. Upon hearing this news, Congressman Charlie Wilson (OH-6) issued the following statement.

“To say that I’m disappointed in the president’s second veto of the children’s health bill is an understatement. This Congress has fought hard to take this country in a new direction. We not only came to consensus on how to insure 10 million children, we fully paid for it. There’s no reason to not insure our children.”
